

[Source as "The Tennessee Encyclopedia of History and Culture © Tennessee Historical Society]

One of the oldest Tennessee counties, Hawkins County was first established as a separate North Carolina county on January 6, 1787, when the state legislature divided Sullivan County, North Carolina. The original county was quite large, extending from the North Fork of the Holston River southwestwardly to the "Big Suck" near present-day Chattanooga. Other counties, or parts of counties, later created from Hawkins include Hancock, Grainger, Jefferson, Knox, Roane, Meigs, and Hamilton. Prior to its creation by North Carolina, the county was Spencer County, State of Franklin.

PHOTO COURTESY OF THE HAWKINS COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY. PHOTO BY JAMES H. HARRIS. COURTESY OF THE HAWKINS COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

PHOTO COURTESY OF THE HAWKINS COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY. PHOTO BY JAMES H. HARRIS. COURTESY OF THE HAWKINS COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.